Until we fix the room architecture, content here is searchable/discoverable within the corp. But this is a great venue to raise an issue for visibility, get input, etc.

The IDAC issue that folks know about is progressing well. We've collected all required information for execs. The next step is get Policy's feedback on the Prominent Disclosure statements in two critical apps (doing so with Camille at 11:15). Then after, Sherry will convene a meeting with exes to discuss findings and get a decision on how to communicate those findings with the right external folks.

From Camille: Got the Kristie approval as well so this comes down to 1) a clear BD & comms response plan and 2) finalizing the Ops plan. Am I missing anything?

Hi team, good morning. Some small quick updates re the IDAC escalation. PR has confirmed from the Vice reporter that because the report findings on the Biden app weren't correct, Vice is choosing not to cover pending more information. IDAC hasn't published independently yet. Engagement with Trump campaign on findings still likely to occur today, but BD/GAPP confirming that timeline.

Thanks, Sherry. Very clear. I think we need explicit confirmation that we should communicate issues to the Trump folks even if the IDAC report does not drop. They still could stand to fix some issues.

Also, there were 18 other apps identified in the IDAC report. Jintae's team has done content review; one has an enforceable violation, but no action has been taken on the violation. I've sent email this morning to Saurav B. and Yen Ming for security review in the same line as was done for Biden and Trump apps. We've asked them to prioritize by number of installs because time is short. Hopefully this will come to nothing, but want to get ahead of any future IDAC reporting. If Vice didn't pick it up, folks think they can amend and shop the story around again.

This is for exec 5 PM newsletter. Andrew provided the statement. It's not 100% correct, though, in that GAPP communicated only generally by phone. The campaign is waiting for the specific details in email.

Trump and Biden Apps Flagged for ID Bridging: PR has confirmed with VICE that they will no longer cover this story, which was originally scheduled to be released today, and the International Digital Accountability Council has not published the story elsewhere. GAPP communicated to the Trump campaign concerns with the campaign official app's insufficient disclosure around certain data collection practices that is in violation of our policy. The campaign is working to push a build on Friday to address the issue within our seven day window.
